TRACTION EXTENSION ENTHUSIASM COMES TO HEAD IN LOCAL MEETING

Three Hundred Men of Rush and Franklin Counties Gather Here to Devise Plans.

TO SHOW I. & C. BEST ROUTE

President Henry Briefly and Frankly States Company's Position in Regard to Extension.

BROOKVILLE BOOSTERS TALK

Provision Made For Committee to Get Free Right-of-Way—Directors Surprised.

Enthusiasm was at such a high pitch, good feeling between Franklin and Rush counties was so apparent, so much interest was evinced in the I. & C. extension to Cincinnati from Rushville and every speaker was in such fine fettle that the meeting of men from the two counties, who are interested in the extension, held in the court house assembly room last night, was a revelation both to the officials of the I. & C. who were present and the local promoters of the meeting.

Charles L. Henry and two directors of the road attended and sixty-nine enthusiastic residents of Franklin county came over for the gathering, besides many people from the intervening towns of Andersonville, New Salem, Laurel and Metamora. Approximately three hundred men attended.

When the enthusiasm had run its course and the climax of the meeting had been reached, the body of men got down to business and perfected an organization which will have to look after the obtaining of the extension for the "Bulltown" route as the "preacher-editor" of Andersonville so aptly named it seventeen years ago.

Mr. Henry told the boosters the engineers would begin today to run the survey and a representative of the company would also start in to get contracts on right-of-way which will be used in case the extension is made from this city. After the survey is made and all the statistics are gathered, the directors and the president, he said, will place the maps before them and decide which would be the most advantageous route.

He declared that the company held no prejudices against anyone and would select a route purely on its own merits. He said there is not over two miles difference between the routes from Greensburg and Rushville and that question would be eliminated in the selection. Tomorrow Mr. Henry and engineers will go from Andersonville to Metamora to select the route to be surveyed.

John D. Megee asked how Franklin and Rush counties could help to bring the extension over their route, because he said he thought that was what the men present wanted to know. Mr. Henry said the boosters can not straighten out the crooks and cut down the hills, but that they can assist in obtaining the right-of-way.

John D. Megee suggested that a smaller committee, probably not to exceed three members from each of the two county seats, be appointed by the business mens' organizations, to confer with the president of the I. & C. and learn as soon as possible the names of the owners of the land through which the route will pass, so that the larger committee may work systematically and without loss of time toward the desired end. Mr. Megee's motion was considered a good idea and was passed by a unanimous vote.

In a short speech of welcome, Anthony Schreite, president of the Retail Merchants Association, who presided at the meeting, welcomed the visitors from the historic town of Brookville and the fine county of Franklin. He spoke briefly of the advantages to be gained by both con-ties and county seats by the running of the line through this uninvaded territory and then called on Charles L. Henry, president of the I. & C.

Mr. Henry spoke frankly and concisely of the plans and future work of the I. & C. He premised his remarks with the assertion that he would be frank concerning the I. & C., with the boosters, for he could not be otherwise. He stated plainly that the I. & C. did not intend to extend over a route where free right-of-way could not be obtained. Mr. Henry declared the traction company was organized with a view of building a line from Indianapolis to Cincinnati, and that it would not have been built but for that purpose because the population between the two cities would not justify the running of a first class line like the I. & C.

The president said it was true the company had passed through a financial disturbance and business depression but that it would not have been organized a year ago but with the purpose of extending on to Cincinnati and carrying out the original intentions of the company. He pointed out there was very little change in the organization and that the original plans would be carried out.

He said, when the line was first organized, the company looked over the territory and decided to build from Connersville by way of Hamilton. He said it had long been the dream of traction men for a high speed line to be erected from Hamilton to Cincinnati. He pointed out that the I. & C. would confront difficulties in getting into Cincinnati on account of a different gauge line being operated in that city. He said that if fast time could not be made over either the Greensburg or Rushville extension the directors would turn down both routes.

Mr. Henry told the boosters the engineers would begin today to run the survey and a representative of the company would also start in to get contracts on right-of-way which will be used in case the extension is made from this city. After the survey is made and all the statistics are gathered, the directors and the president, he said, will place the maps before them and decide which would be the most advantageous route.

He declared that the company held no prejudices against anyone and would select a route purely on its own merits. He said there is not over two miles difference between the routes from Greensburg and Rushville and that question would be eliminated in the selection. Tomorrow Mr. Henry and engineers will go from Andersonville to Metamora to select the route to be surveyed.

John D. Megee asked how Franklin and Rush counties could help to bring the extension over their route, because he said he thought that was what the men present wanted to know. Fred Tate Faces Charge of Giving Intoxicating Liquor to Three Boys, All Minors.

OFFENSE IS A SERIOUS ONE

Police Will Conduct Investigation in Tobe Lucas Case—Do Not Hear From Batesville.

Fred Tate, 22 years old, whose home is said to be in Illinois and who has been employed in a local restaurant for some time past, is in the county jail, charged with giving intoxicating liquor to minors. Tate was arrested this morning by Chief McAllister after Edwin Berry, 17 years old, had told who obtained the liquor for him.

Young Berry was found last night at the corner of Main and Seventh streets in a helpless condition. He was so drunk Chief McAllister phoned for a livery rig to take him to jail. This morning when questioned by the police and Wallace Morgan, the boy told that it was Tate who had purchased the booze. The Berry boy told the officers that Raymond Finney, Robert Vreedenburg and he had given Tate twenty-five cents a piece and that he went and obtained the liquor.

The other two boys both identified Tate this morning as the man who had given them the liquor. None of the three boys is seventeen years old and the practice of giving intoxicating liquor to minors according to the police must stop and an example will be made of Tate. The fine for the offense is not more than $100, to which may be added ninety days in jail.

Tate was taken before Mayor Black late this afternoon to answer the charge. It is not thought any action will be taken against the Berry boy on the intoxication charge. Berry makes his home with James Dugan. The local police have not heard anything from the Batesville officers concerning their coming after Tobe Lucas, who was arrested here Sunday on a wife desertion charge. In order to hold Lucas until an investigation could be made he was arraigned yesterday afternoon before Mayor Black and pleaded guilty to intoxication. He was fined one dollar and costs. It was planned to investigate the case against him this afternoon and several witnesses were called, including the Casady woman with whom he had been living. It is understood Mrs. Casady had her household goods loaded on a wagon preparing to leave the city when the officers arrived there yesterday to serve the summons.

The John Carr-Ed Schantz difficulty, which was to have been heard in Squire Kratzer's court this afternoon was satisfactorily arranged and the case was not heard.

After answering that question the I. & C. president referred again to the Connersville extension and said the company had decided after investigating the conditions in Cincinnati that the I. & C. had better stay out than go in that way and have to change passengers to city cars at the city limits. Following that conclusion, he said, the directors and he went over the Greensburg and Rushville routes and directed a careful survey after it was decided nothing could be said in favor of either when the two were compared. He pointed out the route from Connersville is better from some points of view as there would be a much larger population from which to draw, but that the company hoped to find one of the Defunct Commercial Organization Files Petition in Circuit Court For Dissolution.

SERVES ITS PURPOSE HERE

Its Beginning is Signal For Industrial Awakening of Great Proportions in Rushville.

A suit for dissolution of the Young Men's Commercial Club, incorporated at $10,000 September 19, 1909, filed in the circuit court late yesterday, marks the closing chapter of that organization, the organization which marked the beginning of a new industrial area in Rushville. Since the beginning of that club of young and enterprising business men, Rushville has progressed as she never did before in her history.

The Young Men's Commercial club is to be dissolved because it has run its course and has served its purpose in the industrial development of Rushville. It was a pathfinder. It aroused the interest in industrial Rushville, which has been on the upward trend since that time and which has not reached the climax of its flight yet.

The club was organized by the young business men of Rushville and the aid of the older and wiser heads was solicited. Instead of assisting they gave the youngsters a glassy stare and inferred they would have none of it. The members of the club were discouraged and worked half-heartedly.

They tried a lot selling proposition to raise funds to locate a factory. The sale was started with a lot of enthusiasm and about half of the number of lots was subscribed for when some one threw cold water on the whole proposition. The factory and its representatives were discredited and the rumor went the rounds that it was valueless. The story was started that the proposition started by the club was a miserable venture and would amount to naught.

And the lot sale was a failure after it had been discredited and kicked and cuffed about by men of Rushville who were considered advisers on the questions in which finance was involved. One member of the club conceived the idea that probably the organization of the older business men might meet with more success. And it did.

It was plainly evident that the older business men would not join in with the younger generation and give them a helping hand so there was only one alternative. The member who conceived the new plan carried it out. The Rushville Merchants Association was successfully launched and has been an effective and active organization in Rushville since that time, taking a prominent part in all advancement in Rushville since its birth.

The petition for dissolution states Fred Caldwell, Will L. Newbold, W. O. Feudner, Howard Mullin and John Denmer incorporated the Young Men's Commercial Club September 17, 1909, for $10,000 and the articles set forth the club was organized to "buy and sell real estate and encourage and promote industries in Rushville and Rush county by giving aid and assistance in money and property or both to manufacturers to be located, or that are located in Rushville."

The club stock was never subscribed, paid for, or issued and the club never transacted any business or had any assets or liabilities, according to the petition. There are no stockholders or no creditors, the pe-

VIRGIL HIGGS SERIOUSLY HURT

Sustains Fractured Skull When Wings of Vestibule on C. H. & D. Train Close on His Head.

WALKS HOME AFTER ACCIDENT

Is Son of Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Higgs of Connersville, Formerly of This City.

A young man named Virgil Higgs, eighteen years of age, was dangerously hurt when his head was caught between the wings of a vestibule on an inbound C. H. & D. train, says the Connersville News. The young man had been in Greensburg, it is understood, and was returning when the accident befell him. As the train was nearing the depot about six o'clock, the young man, who was standing in the vestibule, put his head out to see how near they were to the depot. At that moment the engineer applied the brakes and the front coaches slowed down suddenly. The wings of the vestibule between which young Higgs' head was thrust at that unfortunate instant, crushed in together, or as near together as their construction allows them to come, which is about four inches.

With his skull fractured the young passenger dropped to the track, narrowly avoiding being run over by the train, and yet, in that condition, arose it is said, and walked away without his injury having been observed by the train crew. He made his way home, with the help of friends he met on the way, and was soon afterward attended by a physician. One side of his skull is fractured and it is impossible as yet for the physician to tell how serious the accident will prove. It is dangerous, however, and may yet prove fatal, though the last reports were that the patient was resting as well as could be expected.

The young man is a son of Mr. and Mrs. O. P. Higgs of Twenty-First street. They have lived in this city but a short time and were former residents of Rushville. The manner of the accident illustrates the danger of standing in the vestibules of moving trains and recalls the fact that during the last year fully half a dozen persons here have been injured in precisely the same way as was young Higgs.

Prof. Francis G. Blair, State superintendent of public instruction in Illinois, says of Dr. Reed and his work:

"We, the undersigned bishops of the Methodist Episcopal church cordially commend the Rev. Dr. Horace Reed, field lecturer of the World's Purity Federation as worthy of the favorable audience of young and old on the most important and vital subjects of his addresses."

Dr. H. L. A. Nickerson of Quincy, Ill., president of the Illinois State Medical Society, says of him:

"I heartily endorse the work now being done by Dr. Horace Reed and hope that he will have the active co-operation of the profession and others who should be interested in this reform work. His lectures contain a mass of facts that should be known to public."

Prof. Francis G. Blair, State superintendent of public instruction in Illinois, says of Dr. Reed and his work:

"To School Officers and Teachers:

I know something of the object and work of the Illinois Vigilance Association and believe that it will receive the hearty support and encouragement of every good citizen. Dr. Horace Reed field secretary of this association, is a man whose character, experience and ability fit him to promote the work of the association. I commend him and his work heartily to school officers and teachers throughout the State."

TO DELIVER 3 LECTURES HERE

Dr. Horace Reed of World's Purity Federation Will Put in Busy Day Friday.

UNDER MINISTERS' AUSPICES

To Talk to High School in Morning, Women in Afternoon, Mixed Audience at Night.

Dr. Horace Reed, field lecturer of the World's Purity Federation, will put in a busy day here Friday. He is coming to the city under the auspices of the Rushville Ministerial Association, although he will lecture at the St. Paul M. E. church.

Dr. Reed will open his lectures here with a talk before the high school pupils Friday morning on the subject which is nearest his heart, the white slave traffic. In the afternoon he will deliver a lecture for women only at the St. Paul M. E. church at two-thirty o'clock on the subject, "Pure Womanhood." In the evening he will lecture at the same church at seven-thirty o'clock to a mixed audience on "The White Slave Traffic and Some Related Problems."

There is little doubt but what Dr. Reed will be greeted by a large crowd as he comes to the local ministerial association very highly recommended.

The board of bishops of the Methodist Episcopal church adopted the following resolution commanding the work of Dr. Reed:

"We, the undersigned bishops of the Methodist Episcopal church cordially commend the Rev. Dr. Horace Reed, field lecturer of the World's Purity Federation as worthy of the favorable audience of young and old on the most important and vital subjects of his addresses."

Dr. H. L. A. Nickerson of Quincy, Ill., president of the Illinois State Medical Society, says of him:

"I heartily endorse the work now being done by Dr. Horace Reed and hope that he will have the active co-operation of the profession and others who should be interested in this reform work. His lectures contain a mass of facts that should be known to public."

CAMP WINS POOL CONTEST

Sets New High Run Mark With Twenty Balls.

In what was one of the best games of the pool tournament, George Camp defeated Earl Kitchin last night by a score of 100 to 67. The game was well played and was attended by a large crowd. Camp set a new high run record with twenty balls. Following the run of twenty he came back with a run of sixteen, which gave him a lead Kitchin could not overcome. Both men played in good form with Camp having a slight advantage. Tonight Ralph Harrold and Ed McKee

Dr. J. N. Hurty is Seeking Identity of Teacher Who Leaves Cigarette Stubs in Room.

HE'S GOING TO MAKE NOISE

Woman Urges Employment of Teachers Who Use Tobacco be Discontinued.

Dr. J. N. Hurty, secretary of the state board of health, is seeking the identity of a school teacher in Seymour, who, according to a report to the secretary, has been smoking in his school room after school hours and holding meetings in the room with others who smoke and leaving cigar and cigarette stubs about the room.

"When I get his name," declared Dr. Hurty, "I am going to make a noise about it. Let the teachers smoke if they wish, but not about a school building. I hold that a man who will use his school-room for a smoking room is wholly unfit to be trusted with the care of pupils."

A member of the board of school trustees of Seymour has appeared to Dr. Hurty to help him put a stop to the practice. He said in a letter to the secretary that he had been unable to stop it, although he had made repeated efforts.

Miss Edith NeNaughton, state superintendent of the anti-narcotic department of the W. C. T. U., has asked Charles A. Greathouse, state superintendent of public instruction, to use his influence with county superintendents and township, town and city trustees, with a view to discontinue the employment of teachers who smoke or use tobacco in any form.

Dr. Hurty has received a letter from a pupil of the Bourbon high school, complaining of poor heating facilities at the building, and stating that the school board will not furnish relief. The pupil said she was compelled to miss several days from school because of the cold, and had narrowly escaped pneumonia as a result of being compelled to sit in a cold schoolroom.

FAIL TO CERTIFY FUND DEFICIENCY

Some Officials of School Corporations Make Mistakes in Their Reports to State Supt.

TO HELP POOR CORPORATIONS

Failure of a large number of officials of school corporations properly to certify to the state superintendent of public instruction the amount of the current deficiency in their tuition funds, under the state tuition deficiency law, will delay the distribution of the fund, Charles A. Greathouse, state superintendent, says. The superintendent called for the reports to be in, but some are still out, and others had to be sent back because they were not properly certified. The purpose of the deficiency act is to provide sufficient money in the poorer corporations to enable them to carry on their schools for either six or seven months, according to the minimum tuition tax leveled. The fund is made up of a specified percentage of the tuition money paid into the state treasury by the counties.

'MIXED BUTTER' IS UNLAWFUL

That is Farmers And Merchants May Not Sell Kind Under the Law.

MACHINES WILL DO THE WORK

State Chemist Denounces Working of Milk Into Substance Which is Poor Substitute.

H. E. Barnard, chief chemist for the state board of health, has his weather eye out for so-called butter made by placing a pound of real butter and pound of milk together in a patented machine and mixing them thoroughly. If any one is found trying to sell the stuff for butter, Barnard avers, he will find the state food law tapping him on the shoulder and inviting him over to police court.

Various parts of the state have been flooded recently with circulars from the concerns manufacturing the machines. The manufacturers say the addition of the milk to the butter makes it more wholesome, makes it go farther, and provides a butter at about half the cost of ordinary butter.

"The only object in working butter," said Barnard, "is to 'work' the milk out of it, and the standard by which butter is gauged is the lack of water and milk contained. The objection to ordinary country butter is that the makers do not 'work' it enough to take out all of the milk. Now we find a group of manufacturers advertising a machine to undo the work of the butter manufacturer, and claiming it will better the food product. When we find a dealer selling butter from which the original milk has not been removed we prosecute him, and we will certainly prosecute any person selling for butter the kind of stuff the patented machines must certainly produce.

"The machines are advertised for household use on the plea that the housewife can make a pound of butter go twice as far. However, the housewife who uses it will merely find she has reduced a pound of good, solid, wholesome butter, capable of keeping sweet for several days, to a milky, mushy mass that will spoil in a short time."

Barnard has not found any of the stuff on the market in any part of the state, but has instructed his field inspectors to watch for it.

VERSION OF MAD DOG SCARE

Said Several Half-Starved Canines Were Shipped In.

Another version of the mad dog scare in the William Stanley neighborhood between Arlington and Carthage has been given. It is reported a dozen or more dogs were imported into Arlington from some unknown place in a box car. The dogs were half-starved and frightened, when they were released, and started across the country together. A cow of William Stanley's which was bitten by a dog several weeks ago went mad and had to be killed. The dog was killed and its head sent to the State laboratory but no negri bodies were found.

The superintendent and the music teacher of the Knightstown schools visited here today.

EXTENSION ENTHUSIASM COMES TO HEAD IN MEETING

Continued from page 1. two routes being investigated would give better time and traffic also.

Mr. Henry stated that farms through which traction lines are built are increased in value any place from $10 to $25 an acre. He related some of his experiences in this regard to prove the assertion. He said the company expected to maintain a three-hour service between Indianapolis and Cincinnati in order to compete with steam lines.

M. P. Hubbard, the Brookville banker, who appeared to be the leader of the Brookville boosters, followed Mr. Henry. He said Mr. Henry had been very frank in his statements and he felt the people of Franklin county were ready to be just as frank with him. If we haven't got a proposition from a business standpoint, he declared, to land this interurban road, we can never expect to get it.

Mr. Hubbard pointed out the I. & C. would draw traffic from nine townships in Franklin county, which contains approximately four-fifths of the population. He said the only competition would be the Whitewater railroad. He estimated the I. & C. could expect a hundred passengers a day for six months of the year to and from the fishing camps that are stationed in the Whitewater valley. He said he believed this line would have enough good points to offset those of the Greensburg line and declared Brookville and Franklin county was ready to extend a helping hand if the way was pointed out.

Ed Smith of Indianapolis, who has business interests in Laurel, was among the first of the boosters for the Whitewater valley. He said he had traveled all over the United States and investigated the best fruit regions and was convinced the Whitewater valley was the best place to grow fruit. He told of the wonderful opportunities for a traction company which would do a light freight business in that section and said the traction company could have as much of his land as it desired, should it pass near Laurel. He said he was for the traction company no matter what way it went.

The Rev. F. Wilson Kaler, the preacher-editor, the pioneer traction enthusiast, recalled he built a traction line over the "Bulltown" route in his dreams seventeen years ago and had been after it hot and heavy ever since. He said some people had called him a fanatic and had threatened to put him in the insane asylum but that he would never stop until that line came through. He said he thought the company would have no trouble getting a free right-of-way in and around Andersohville.

John Schultze of Laurel, business partner of Ed Smith, spoke briefly of the opportunities of the Whitewater valley and said he saw no reason why the I. & C. should not be convinced that is the best route. James Miller of New Salem said he thought people in the vicinity of New Salem were willing to do the right thing and that they are all anxious for the extension.

John S. Martin who said he was the only "hayseed" in the Brookville crowd, made a very nice talk in which he declared he voiced the sentiment of the farmers of the Whitewater valley when he said there is a need for a traction line in that vicinity and it would be given sufficient traffic and light freight business to make it pay.

John C. Shirk of Brookville spoke briefly of the advantages to be gained by Franklin county with the traction line and he declared Franklin county was in the right frame of mind to treat the promoters right.

Will M. Sparks of this city spoke in a happy vein. He said he would gladly give a free right-of-way if he had the land and that he would lend all the help he could. He declared Rushville can get most anything it wants if it is wanted bad enough.

W. P. King who lives in Rush county and whose land extends into Franklin said he would give a free right-of-way to the company.

President Henry halted the proceedings a minute, stating that he and the directors were compelled to leave. He said it had been suggested to him by the speeches following his that he forgot to mention the I. & C. intended eventually to take care of all produce over the route traversed which was not reached by a steam road.

W. P. Gordon of near Metamora spoke for farmers in that vicinity, and said he believed the I. & C. would experience no difficulty in getting the free right-of-way in that vicinity.

I. N. Bridgeman, editor of the Brookville American, exploited the natural resources of the Whitewater valley in a brief and clear talk and declared that the I. & C. could not do better than take the "Bulltown" route. He said he, too, had been called a fanatic on this topic, but that he was going to keep "hammering" away.

Lieut. Gov. Hall said he believed he would go Will Sparks one better; he would give a right-of-way on someone else's farm. He related a few stories about historic Brookville and the Whitewater Valley railroad.

Pres. Henry was accompanied here on a special car last night for the meeting by J. F. Wild and J. J. Appel of Indianapolis, directors of the company, and his son, Lewis Henry, who is obtaining the right-of-way. They were exceedingly well pleased with the meeting and were greatly surprised by the size of the crowd and the interest which was shown.

The Brookville boosters all wore red badges with the words "I & C. Scenic Route Boosters Club" inscribed on them. They all talked Franklin county and Rushville extension from the time they hit Rushville until they left here. Practically every business interest in Brookville was represented.

In view of the fact that the route as far as Andersonville has already been selected it is pointed out that it is possible now for the local boosters to begin on the free right-of-way campaign at once. It is thought action in this regard will be taken shortly.

John C. Shirk of Brookville spoke briefly of the advantages to be gained by Franklin county with the traction line and he declared Franklin county was in the right frame of mind to treat the promoters right.

AMUSEMENTS

The Princess has two pictures tonight that are said to be far above the average. "Molly Pitcher" is a Kalem film relating an incident in the battle of Monmouth. It is a thrilling picture and is based on actual history. "Hypnotizing the Hypnotist" is a Vitagraph comedy full of funny situations. Florence Turner plays one of the leading parts. The picture is original and deals with a novel subject. Miss Richards will sing, "Let us be Sweethearts Again."

The Portola offers the usual two pictures tonight. "The Sick Man From the East" is a powerful detective story, the scenes of which are laid in the west. "Taking His Medicine" is a Biograph comedy. Charles VanCamp will sing "I Love You Best at Twilight." "Vanity Fair," a Vitagraph production in three reels will be the attraction Friday and Saturday nights. This well-known work of pictures has been reproduced in motion pictures without the loss of its individual qualities. "Vanity Fair" is said to be an uninterrupted delight and a revelation in the art of picture making. Miss Helen Gardner plays the part of "Becky Sharpe."

"She," the two-reel Thanhouser production to be seen tomorrow night at the Palace is a story dealing with the mysteries of Egyptian worship, with the tricks and wonders of that magic, which even in the most ancient times has surrounded the land of the Pharaohs with a certain indefinable awesome spell. The pictures of H. Rider Haggard's famous tale are very complete and the story is told in detail. Amenastas is in love with a young priest. Kallikrates and induces him to forswear his vows and elope with her. They journey to the land where "She" reigns supreme. "She" causes the death of Kallikrates and his wife escaped. For several thousand years his death is handed down until it reaches a young Englishman, Lionel Vincey, who goes to Egypt for revenge. Tonight the pictures are "The Playright," a Reliance" and "The Convict's Song," an Ambrosia film.

tion says, and the only persons interested are the petitioners. Under the law it was necessary to continue to make reports for the corporation to the secretary of State and to pay the tax as provided by the statute. This was considered an unnecessary expense. It was for this reason the petition to dissolve the club was filed.

The club raised one thousand dollars in cash in two months at the dawn of its career. The most of the money came from the young business men and other young men about the city who were employed on a salary. They all joined at five dollars a membership.

Of this one thousand dollars there was seventy-nine dollars left in the treasury of the defunct organization until recently when the directors got together and decided to turn that amount into the treasury of the Retail Merchants Association, which was done recently. The association will be benefitted that much less the cost of the action brought in the circuit court.

Thus ends the story of the Young Men's Commercial Club. It won and it lost. It lost its life but it won by setting in motion a wave of public sentiment in favor of united effort to improve Rushville.

The Phantom of the Opera

By
Gaston Leroux

Illustrations by M. G. Kettner

He had lived in India and acquired an incredible skill in the art of strangulation. He would make them lock him into a courtyard to which they brought a warrior—usually, a man condemned to death—armed with a long pike and broadsword. Erik had only his lasso; and it was always just when the warrior thought that he was going to fell Erik with a tremendous blow that we heard the lasso whistle through the air. With a turn of the wrist, Erik tightened the noose round his adversary's neck and, in this fashion, dragged him before the little sultana and her women, who sat looking from a window and applauding. The little sultana herself learned to wield the Punjab lasso and killed several of her women and even of the friends who visited her. But I prefer to drop this terrible subject of the rosy hours of Mazenderan. I have mentioned it only to explain why, on arriving with the Vicomte de Chagny in the cellars of the opera, I was bound to protect my companion against the ever-threatening danger of death by strangling. My pistols could serve no purpose, for Erik was not likely to show himself; but Erik could always strangle us. I had no time to explain all this to the viscount; besides, there was nothing to be gained by complicating the position. I simply told M. de Chagny to keep his hand at the level of his eyes, with the arm bent, as though waiting for the command to fire. With his victim in this attitude, it is impossible even for the most expert strangler to throw the lasso with advantage. It catches you not only round the neck, but also round the arm or hand. This enables you easily to unloose the lasso, which then becomes harmless.

After avoiding the commissary of police, a number of door-shutters and the firemen, after meeting the rat-catcher and passing the man in the felt hat unperceived, the viscount and I arrived without obstacle in the third cellar, between the set piece and the scene from the Roi de Lahore, and jumped into the house which Erik had built himself in the double case of the foundation-walls of the opera. And this was the easiest thing in the world for him to do, because Erik was one of the chief contractors under Philippe Garnier, the architect of the opera, and continued to work by himself when the works were officially suspended, during the war, the siege of Paris and the Commune.

I knew my Erik too well to feel at all comfortable on jumping into his house. I knew what he had made of a certain palace at Mazenderan. From being the most honest building conceivable, he soon turned it into a house of the very devil, where you could not utter a word but it was overheard or repeated by an echo. With his trap-doors the monster was responsible for endless tragedies of all kinds. He hit upon astonishing inventions. Of these, the most curious, horrible and dangerous was the so-called torture-chamber. Except in special cases, when the little sultana amused herself by inflicting suffering on you, you are crying: you are afraid of me! And yet I am not really wicked. Love me and you shall see! All I wanted was to be loved for myself. If you loved me I should be as gentle as a lamb; and you could do anything with me that you pleased."

Soon the moans that accompanied this sort of love's litany increased and increased. I have never heard anything more despairing; and M. de Chagny and I recognized that this terrible lamentation came from Erik himself. Christine seemed to be standing dumb with horror, without the strength to cry out, while the monster was on his knees before her.

Three times over, Erik fiercely bawled his fate:

"You don't love me! You don't love me! You don't love me!"

And then, more gently:

"Why do you cry? You know it gives me pain to see you cry!"

A silence.

Each silence gave us fresh hope. We said to ourselves:

"Perhaps he has left Christine behind the wall."

And we thought only of the possibility of warning Christine Daae of our presence, unknown to the monster. We were unable to leave the torture-chamber now, unless Christine opened the door to us; and it was only on this condition that we could hope to help her, for we did not even know where the door might be.

Suddenly, the silence in the next room was disturbed by the ringing of an electric bell. There was a bound on the other side of the wall and Erik's voice of thunder:

"Somebody ringing! Walk in, please!"

A sinister chuckle.

"Who has come bothering now? Wait for me here. . . . I am going to tell the siren to open the door."

Steps moved away, a door closed. I had no time to think of the fresh horror that was preparing; I forgot that the monster was only going out perhaps to perpetrate a fresh crime; I understood but one thing: Christine was alone behind the wall!

The Vicomte de Chagny was already calling to her:

"Christine! Christine!"

As we could hear what was said in the next room, there was no reason why my companion should not be heard in his turn. Nevertheless, the viscount had to repeat his cry time after time.

At last, a faint voice reached us.

"I am dreaming!" it said.

"Christine, Christine, it is I, Raoul!"

"But answer me, Christine! . . . In heaven's name, if you are alone, answer me!"

Then Christine's voice whispered Raoul's name.

"Yes! Yes! It is I! It is not a dream! . . . Christine, trust me!

"We are here to save you . . . to be prudent! When you hear the monster, warn us!"

Then Christine gave way to fear. She trembled lest Erik should discover where Raoul was hidden; she told us in a few hurried words that Erik had gone quite mad with love and that he had decided to kill everybody and himself with everybody if she did not consent to become his wife. He had given her till eleven o'clock the next evening for reflection. It was the last respite. She must choose, as he said, between the wedding mass and the requiem.

And Erik had then uttered a phrase which Christine did not quite understand:

"Yes or no! If your answer is no, everybody will be dead and buried! But I understood the sentence perupon some unoffending citizen, no one was let into it but wretches condemned to death. And, even then, when these had "had enough," they were always at liberty to put an end to themselves with a Punjab lasso or bow-string, left for their use at the foot of an iron tree.

My alarm, therefore, was great when I saw that the room into which M. le Vicomte de Chagny and I had dropped was an exact copy of the torture-chamber of the rosy hours of Mazenderan. At our feet, I found the Punjab lasso which I had been dreading all the evening. I was convinced that this rope had already done duty for Joseph Buquet, who, like myself, must have caught Erik one evening working the stone in the third cellar. He probably tried it in his turn, fell into the torture-chamber and only left it hanged. I can well imagine Erik dragging the body, in order to get rid of it, to the scene from the Roi de Lahore, and hanging it there as an example, or to increase the superstitious terror that was to help him in guarding the approaches to his lair! Then, upon reflection, Erik went back to fetch the Punjab lasso, which is very curiously made out of catgut, and which might have set an examining magistrate thinking. This explains the disappearance of the rope.

And now I discovered the lasso, at our feet, in the torture-chamber! . . . I am no coward, but a cold sweat covered my forehead as I moved the little red disk of my lantern over the walls.

M. de Chagny noticed it and asked: "What is the matter, sir?" I made him a violent sign to be silent.

CHAPTER XXII.

In the Torture Chamber.

We were in the middle of a little six-cornered room, the sides of which were covered with mirrors from top to bottom. In the corners, we could clearly see the "joins" in the glasses, the segments intended to turn on their gear; yes, I recognized them and I recognized the iron tree in the corner, at the bottom of one of those segments . . . the iron tree, with its iron branch, for the hanged men.

I seized my companion's arm: the Vicomte de Chagny was all a-quiver, eager to shout to his betrothed that he was bringing her help. I feared that he would not be able to contain himself.

Suddenly, we heard a noise on our left. It sounded at first like a door opening and shutting in the next room; and then there was a dull moan. I clutched M. de Chagny's arm more firmly still; and then we distinctly heard these words:

"You must make your choice! The wedding mass or the requiem mass!"

I recognized the voice of the monster.

There was another moan, followed by a long silence.

I was persuaded by now that the monster was unaware of our presence in his house, for otherwise he would certainly have managed not to let us hear him. He would only have had to close the little invisible window through which the torture-lovers look down into the torture-chamber.

Besides, I was certain that, if he had known of our presence, the tortures would have begun at once.

The important thing was not to let him know; and I dreaded nothing so much as the impulsive nature of the Vicomte de Chagny, who wanted to rush through the walls to Christine Daae, whose moans we continued to hear at intervals.

"The requiem mass is not at all gay," Erik's voice resumed, "whereas the wedding mass—you can take my word for it—is magnificent! You must take a resolution and know your own mind! I can't go on living like this, like a mole in a burrow! Don Juan Triumphant is finished; and now I want to live like everybody else. I want to have a wife like everybody else and to take her out on Sundays. I have invented a mask that makes me look like anybody. People will not even turn round in the streets. You will be the happiest of women. And we will sing, all by ourselves, till we swoon away with deight. You are crying: you are afraid of me! And yet I am not really wicked. Love me and you shall see! All I wanted was to be loved for myself. If you loved me I should be as gentle as a lamb; and you could do anything with me that you pleased."

Soon the moans that accompanied this sort of love's litany increased and increased. I have never heard anything more despairing; and M. de Chagny and I recognized that this terrible lamentation came from Erik himself.

Christine seemed to be standing dumb with horror, without the strength to cry out, while the monster was on his knees before her.

Three times over, Erik fiercely bawled his fate:

"You don't love me! You don't love me! You don't love me!"

And then, more gently:

"Why do you cry? You know it gives me pain to see you cry!"

A silence.

Each silence gave us fresh hope. We said to ourselves:

"Perhaps he has left Christine behind the wall."

And we thought only of the possibility of warning Christine Daae of our presence, unknown to the monster. We were unable to leave the torture-chamber now, unless Christine opened the door to us; and it was only on this condition that we could hope to help her, for we did not even know where the door might be.

Suddenly, the silence in the next room was disturbed by the ringing of an electric bell. There was a bound on the other side of the wall and Erik's voice of thunder:

"Somebody ringing! Walk in, please!"

A sinister chuckle.

"Who has come bothering now? Wait for me here. . . . I am going to tell the siren to open the door."

Steps moved away, a door closed. I had no time to think of the fresh horror that was preparing; I forgot that the monster was only going out perhaps to perpetrate a fresh crime; I understood but one thing: Christine was alone behind the wall!

The Vicomte de Chagny was already calling to her:

"Christine! Christine!"

As we could hear what was said in the next room, there was no reason why my companion should not be heard in his turn. Nevertheless, the viscount had to repeat his cry time after time.

At last, a faint voice reached us.

"I am dreaming!" it said.

"Christine, Christine, it is I, Raoul!"

"But answer me, Christine! . . . In heaven's name, if you are alone, answer me!"

Then Christine's voice whispered Raoul's name.

"Yes! Yes! It is I! It is not a dream! . . . Christine, trust me!

"We are here to save you . . . to be prudent! When you hear the monster, warn us!"

Then Christine gave way to fear. She trembled lest Erik should discover where Raoul was hidden; she told us in a few hurried words that Erik had gone quite mad with love and that he had decided to kill everybody and himself with everybody if she did not consent to become his wife. He had given her till eleven o'clock the next evening for reflection. It was the last respite. She must choose, as he said, between the wedding mass and the requiem.

And Erik had then uttered a phrase which Christine did not quite understand:

"Yes or no! If your answer is no, everybody will be dead and buried! But I understood the sentence perfectly, for it corresponded in a terrible manner with my own dreadful thought.

"Can you tell us where Erik is?" I asked.

She replied that he must have left the house.

"Could you make sure?"

"No. I am fastened. I cannot stir a limb."

When we heard this, M. de Chagny and I gave a yell of fury. Our safety, the safety of all three of us, depended on the girl's liberty of movement.

"But where are you?" asked Christine.

"There are only two doors in my room, the Louis-Philippe room of which I told you, Raoul; a door through which Erik comes and goes, and another which he has never opened before me and which he has forbidden me ever to go through, because he says it is the most dangerous of the doors, the door of the torture-chamber!"

THE PRESIDENT NAMES JUSTICE

Mahlon Pitney of New Jersey to Succeed Harlan.

HE IS THE STATE CHANCELLOR

Mr. Taft's Choice For Vacant Position on the Supreme Bench of the United States Is Reported to Be a Man of Excellent Attainments Whose Long Judicial Experience Qualifies Him For the New Dignity.

Washington, Feb. 20.—President Taft has sent to the senate the nomination of Mahlon Pitney, chancellor of the state of New Jersey, to be an associate justice of the United States supreme court. He will succeed the late John M. Harlan of Kentucky. Mr. Taft does not anticipate any opposition to the nomination in the senate.

Chancellor Pitney long has been a prominent figure in New Jersey. His father, Henry C. Pitney, was vice chancellor of New Jersey. His mother was Sarah Louise Halstead. He was born at Morristown, N. J., on Feb. 5, 1858. He was graduated from Princeton in 1879. In 1882 he received a master of arts degree, and in 1908 the university conferred upon him the degree of doctor of laws. He was admitted to the bar in 1882, and he practiced in Morristown. In 1891 he married Florence T. Shelton of Morristown. Chancellor Pitney is a Republican in politics. His home is in Morristown.

As chancellor of New Jersey Judge Pitney is at the head of the court of chancery and receives a salary of $11,000 a year, as much as the chief justice of the state gets. He is a man of calm, judicial temperament, but warm in his friendships. By the bar and bench of New Jersey he is regarded as a model judge. He was elected to congress in 1894 in the old Fourth district, and was re-elected in 1896. In 1898 he was elected to the state senate from Morris county. In 1900 he was the majority leader on the floor of the senate, and in 1901 he served as president of the senate. Chancellor Pitney always took an active part in legislation, both in the national house of representatives and in the state senate. In 1901 he was nominated by Governor Voorhees for justice of the state supreme court for a term of seven years, and in 1908 was named as chancellor for a term of seven years. The chancellor is the head of the court of chancery, one of the vanishing relics of the English system of law in this country. He is also the ordinary or surrogate general and judge of the prerogative court of the state.

CHARGES DENIED

Himmelblau Was Paid to Make "Confession," Says Dean.

Chicago, Feb. 20.—Charges that the dictograph records in the Gary (Ind.) bribery scandal were "faked" were denied by Thomas B. Dean. Dean caused bribe solicitation charges to be made last summer against half the city officials of the steel plant city.

In a deposition taken in Chicago on Saturday Meyer Himmelblau, who has been employed as a stenographer by Dean, charged he "faked" dictograph records of conversations in which the city officials took a part. Dean, who is staying at the Congress hotel, says Himmelblau's so-called confession is false and that the stenographer will be prosecuted for perjury. He asserts Himmelblau was paid to make his "confession."

Brisk Battle in Progress.

Mexico City, Feb. 20.—Word comes from Cuernavaca that a severe battle is raging near Santa Maria, where Governor Juencio Robles has been attacked by the rebels under one of the ablest Zapista leaders. The forces engaged number 1,200 on the part of the federales and 2,000 rebels, and it is believed that the life or death of the present administration hangs on the outcome.

Former State Senator in Trouble.

New York, Feb. 20.—Former Senator Frank Gardner, who was arrested with George H. Decker, a nurse, on a charge of conspiring with Decker to get hold of the fortune of the aged Brooklyn recluse, Samuel E. Haslett, is now under a new charge of feloniously obtaining the signature of Haslett to two wills and a power of attorney.

Mystery of Attack On Vandalia Train Remains.

WAS EITHER DRUNK OR CRAZY

Officers Who Have Investigated Recent Mysterious Midnight Attack on Fast Mail Train Have About Reached the Conclusion That It Was Not Based Upon Any Deep, Dark Plot to Loot the Mails.

Terre Haute, Ind., Feb. 20.—There is absolutely no evidence of a train robbery plot in the appearance of the man on the tender of the engine of the fast mail of the Vandalia Friday night and his shooting at Engineer Davis and Fireman McLean. Superintendent Downing of the Vandalia says the man was either drunk or crazy; that train robbers never try to stop a train to hold it up by pulling the bell cord, as this man did, from the platform of the car next the tender, and which Engineer Davis disregarded, because the signal was sounded wrong for a stop at that point. Almost immediately after the signal was given the man began shooting.

Sheriff Walsh and his deputies and the city detectives have been trying to find two West Terre Haute men. They are under suspicion of robbing at least one store west of the city, and it is known that on Friday they exchanged two new revolvers, which probably had been stolen, for two old ones. The police, however, do not believe either of these men was concerned in the stopping of the train.

FOUND BODY IN BARN

Floyd County Young Man Had Been Absent Since Feb. 6.

New Albany, Ind., Feb. 20.—The decomposed body of William Henriott, aged twenty-one years, son of Alexander Henriott, who had been missing from his home, nine miles southwest of this city, since Feb. 6, was found in an abandoned barn two miles from his present home. Under the body was a revolver, with one cartridge exploded, and a bullet wound was found in the left breast. The father said no report had been made of the young man's disappearance from home, as it was supposed he had gone to Louisville and obtained work.

ROADHOUSE KEEPER SHOT

Quarrel Is Said to Have Been Over Family Affairs.

Terre Haute, Ind., Feb. 20.—Orbert Dowdy, proprietor of a roadhouse five miles north of the city, was shot by John Lathrop, and it is said at the hospital he will die. Lathrop said as he was coming up the cellar stairs at the roadhouse Dowdy struck him, and he fired one shot, which entered Dowdy's abdomen. Lathrop is twenty-eight years old and formerly was a clerk in the local freight offices of the Vandalia railroad. It is said he had quarreled with Dowdy over family affairs.

WHIPPING INSTEAD OF JAIL

Town Marshal Punishes Miner With Buggy Whip.

Petersburg, Ind., Feb. 20.—Because George Denning, a coal miner, who became intoxicated, refused to leave when ordered, Thomas Whitney, town marshal, obtained a buggy whip and gave Denning a severe whipping. Denning wished to be put in jail. Whitney said that Denning desired to be locked up so he could have a place to stay for several days, and that he thought the whipping was a greater punishment than the jail sentence.

Died Under Assumed Name.

Terre Haute, Ind., Feb. 20.—Harold Vegoe, formerly township trustee of Van Buren township, Clay county, where he was accused of being a defaulter and latterly a solicitor in Terre Haute for an industrial insurance company, committed suicide by taking poison in a hotel where he had registered under another name.

Jury's Verdict in Damage Case.

Bedford, Ind., Feb. 20.—In a suit for $10,000 damages against the Bedford Heat, Light and Power company and the Central Union Telephone company, the jury gave Daniel McOske a verdict for $800. The suit grew out of the killing of McOske's little son when at night he came in contact with a telephone wire.

Gas Leak Claims Second Victim.

Logansport, Ind., Feb. 20.—The leak in the gas main at Seventeenth and Toledo streets, which caused the death of Mrs. Frank Vance, and overcame a dozen other persons, claimed its second victim when Fred Vance, aged fifteen, son of the dead woman, died in St. Joseph hospital.

Young Woman's Mysterious Death.
Bloomington, Ind., Feb. 20.—Miss Mary Thrasher, aged twenty-seven, daughter of C. F. Thrasher, who lives near Harmony, is dead of tansy poisoning. It is not known whether the poison was taken with suicide intent or accidentally.

DISCUSSION OF INCENDIARISM

Said to Have Been Carried On in Iron Workers' Hall.

PHOTOGRAPH OF A RESOLUTION

Is Now Reported to Be a Part of the Government's Exhibit in Its Case Against the Alleged Dynamiters—This Resolution Relating to the Use of Explosives Said to Have Been Introduced in Ironworkers' Convention.

Indianapolis, Feb. 20.—One of the charges in the dynamite cases is that the dynamiting program of the iron workers' union was actually brought officially to the attention of the international convention of the union at Rochester, N. Y., in 1910.

A resolution pertaining to the dynamiting it is charged, was laid before that convention for consideration, thus, according to the contention of those who accuse the iron workers, showing that on the part of some of the iron workers there was little concealment when among their fellow-unionists as to who was doing the work. It is charged also that this resolution coming out openly before the convention shows that many of the men at the convention were believed to be "on the inside" as to who was doing the dynamiting.

It is a fact that many of the delegates of the iron workers' international conventions in recent years are under indictment by the federal grand jury. A comparison of the list of delegates to the recent convention with the list of indicted men, shows that the men under indictment were nearly all prominent delegates to conventions. The perusal of the printed proceedings of the conventions shows that nearly all of the men whose names are frequently found in the reports are under indictment.

At the Rochester convention, it is charged, an eastern delegate passed up a paper which sought to have the convention "resolve" as follows:

"That no more bombs or explosions of any kind be exploded while this convention is in session."

The records of the convention, including the copies of all resolutions introduced by delegates were preserved. Among them, it is said, was one pertaining to the explosion. This interesting bit of paper passed through several hands after the arrest of the McMamaras and McManigal, it is said, and during that time some photographs of it were taken. Recently, it is said, the original came into the possession of the government.

A photograph of the resolution was shown to Assistant United States Attorney Clarence Nichols. He refused to discuss it in any manner. Later United States Attorney Miller was reached regarding the resolution. Mr. Miller exhibited considerable interest in trying to ascertain how the photograph had got into the hands of a newspaper man, and also sought to learn who was said to have photographed the resolution and when it was done. When asked if it was not true that the government had the original of the resolution, Mr. Miller said he could not discuss that.

Ryan Scouts Charge.

Indianapolis, Feb. 20.—President Ryan of the iron workers said that the story about the Rochester resolution was "too ridiculous to talk about."

"Of course it isn't true," he said. "Why, our conventions are open. The proceedings become known just as soon as the convention adjourns."

OUTWITTED COURT

Tennessee Mob Would Not Let the Law Take Its Orderly Course.

Shelbyville, Tenn., Feb. 20.—Three negroes, David Neill, David Bomar and Watt Greer, charged with killing Special Officer S. W. Everson of the Nashville, Chattanooga & St. Louis railroad, and throwing his body from a train at Bell Buckle, were taken from officers in the courthouse here by a mob and beaten to death.

The lynching took place just after their attorney, W. S. Crowell, had waived examination to the circuit court. The officers were in the act of returning the negroes to jail, the trial justice having refused bail. By what appeared to be a rearranged plan, the leaders of the mob and several men in the crowd simultaneously moved up on the men, seized them, took them from the officers and beat them to death.

Kentucky Capital Claps on Lid.

Frankfort, Ky., Feb. 20.—Major James H. Polsgrove of this city, is determined to remove even the appearances of evil from the capital. All gambling games and blind tigers have been ordered closed. Inmates of the houses of questionable character have been told to pack their clothes and go.

Will Discard Their Robes.
London, Feb. 20.—Hereafter the representatives of the new regime in China will appear in the same dress and adopt the same manners as the Europeans. The wearing of queues will be a rarity in the near future, as most of the diplomats have already had their "pigtails" cut off.
